As Director of Programs for the Center for Innovation, with primary responsibility for day-to-day management, including planning, implementation and evaluation, of specific programs. Before joining the Task Force as a project officer for All Kids Count in 1996, Ms. Wild worked for the Hawaii State Health Department as the Infant Immunization Program Manager, responsible for directing a statewide immunization campaign, developing and enforcing state immunization requirements for school entry, advising physicians and nurses on recommended immunizations and assessing state immunization levels.

As a Project Officer for All Kids Count, Ms. Wild had primary responsibility for monitoring the progress of state and local immunization registry projects, providing technical assistance to the projects, developing and analyzing quantitative and qualitative surveys, participating in the development of national guidelines on immunization registry development, and providing expert advice to projects nationwide. She is particularly interested in legislation and procedures for maintaining the confidentiality and security of data in health information systems.

Ms. Wild received her BA from the University of Colorado (1986) and MPH in Community Development/Health Education from the University of Hawaii at Manoa (1991).
